The Pocket Theatre presents
Don Quixotes by Greek Playwright/Actor Glyka Stoiou:
A Cross-Cultural Collaboration

WHAT: The unbelievable adventures of Don Quixote as told by two scamps, who go on a trip to 16th century Spain and play almost all the roles in an interactive show that creates an explosion of images reminding us of a hero who gives courage to those who wish to change the world for the better. After visiting Greek schools and theatres, as well as presenting in Luxemburg and Alaska, Don Quixotes lands in Seattle.

WHO: An experiment in long-distance collaboration utilizing contemporary communication technologies, Don Quixotes (adapted from the Cervantes by Glyka Stoiou) is being staged on the premise that a Greek actor (Stoiou) and an American actor (Carolynne Wilcox) can rehearse together with a director (Rebecca Goldberg), mostly via Skype, and deliver a bold, physical and interactive experience suitable for audiences of all ages.

WHERE: The Pocket Theatre, 8312 Greenwood Ave N, Seattle, WA 98103

WHEN: Thursday, June 9 at 8:30pm

WHY: To see what happens when a beloved tale is performed with the benefit of rehearsals occurring mostly via modern Skype technology, with two actors in separate countries. To cross cultural borders through theatre. Has technology amplified the possibilities for artistic collaboration?

TICKETS: $10 online at www.thepocket.org (online ticketing closes at 4pm) or $14 at the door
